

"Borrowed" Joy Ride Nearly Spoils Wedding For Automobile Owner

Tony Salai came near ruining a perfectly good wedding. One of the participants left his auto on Third Avenue a few minutes before the ceremony, and Tony began a joy ride which ended in Essex Market.

It all happened on account of Borah's beard. Borah was proud of his beard, which was of a deep reddish hue, and would have done credit to any patriarch, but according to his testimony before Judge Nolan at the Essex Market court the boys of the neighborhood followed him around and made fun of his most prized possession.

Conrad Zinechuck of Jersey took the tube and entered Manhattan with a roll of $300 in his overcoat pocket, savings which he had intended to place in the savings bank. He went to a lodging house where there were no locks on the doors and seven or eight men slept in one room. Conrad forgot all about his wealth and went to looked for it, it was gone, and the next day it was back in my pocket. "Did you see Ignatz take the $300?" "No." "How do you know he took it?" "He was sleeping near it and was the only one who wouldn't be frisked, the next day."

sleep, leaving the roll in his overcoat pocket. Then some remarkable sleight of hand stunts followed. A witness for Conrad was called. "What do you know about it?" "Ignatz took the $300 from Conrad's overcoat."
